The detailed syllabus will offer a set of websites for most classes, as well as an introductory paragraph or two situating the topic of the day. You should go through all of the websites and readings before the class, thinking about the material presented, taking notes as necessary, and engaging closely with the material. Classes will largely be run as discussions, not lectures, after a preliminary mini-lecture. This means that your engagement with the material, and your willingness to discuss it in class, will be a significant feature of the course. You will not be sufficiently engaged with the course if you just come to class and take notes from the class discussion, or check the course website for the class reviews which the teaching team will provide. At the same time, you should use your discretion; some of the websites are very full and detailed, with more detail than is necessary for you at this level. Others are quite short clips, and still others are extended but user-friendly videos. Some effort has been made to provide different kinds of material each week, to appeal to different learning preferences.

Course Evaluation
The final grade will be calculated as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Mid-term 1 - November 7, 2016</td>
<td>20%</td>
</tr>
<tr>

<td>7.5%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Final Examination</td>
<td>40%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Participation Marks - Bonus up to 3%</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The two mid-terms and the final examination will have short-answer and identification questions amounting to about 25% of the total, and short and long essay questions whose value will be about 75% of the total. Sample midterms and final examinations will be posted as study aids.

Learning Cell and Online Assignment: These short assignments will offer students significant choice, and an opportunity to perfect their arguments about one specific aspect of the Middle Ages.

Participation: These bonus marks will be awarded for evidence of having completed the class preparation, and for good contributions to class discussions. Good contributions need not be lengthy or frequent; they should however be respectful of the class environment, engaged with the material, investigative in nature, and relevant to the issue currently under discussion.
