

Limited-Term Faculty Position
Clinical Education Coordinator in Speech-Language Pathology
School of Communication Sciences and Disorders

The School of Communication Sciences and Disorders of the Faculty of Health Sciences at Western University invites applications for a Limited-Term (potential for renewal) faculty position for 3 to 5 years at the rank of Lecturer or Assistant Professor. Rank and salary will be commensurate with the applicant's qualifications and experience. This academic position will serve the role of Clinical Education Coordinator in Speech-Language Pathology. Duties include coordinating clinical placements, development of new clinical placements, conducting student practicum education (i.e., student supervision), teaching clinical aspects of Speech-Language Pathology, being a mentor to students for clinical education and training, providing clinical services by carrying a caseload of cases for assessment and treatment of speech, language, voice, or resonance disorders in children or adults, possibility to participate in on-going and new research activities, managing clinical resources, completing administrative duties associated with clinical practicum, and undertaking service within the School and Faculty.

Candidates must hold at least a Master's degree in Speech-Language Pathology and hold or be eligible for licensure by the College of Audiologists and Speech-Language Pathologists of Ontario. Prerequisite requirements include at least eight years of professional experience in Speech-Language Pathology involving a general caseload and extensive experience in the direct supervision of speech-language pathology students. Candidates are required to include and to identify in their application the details/explanations of their speech-language pathology student supervision experiences (e.g., detailed account of how many and which type of students, for what periods of time, areas of practice, etc.). Essential qualities of applicants include strong interpersonal and organizational skills, and current knowledge of professional practice guidelines and standards. Preference will be given to candidates with significant experiences in the clinical coordination of community placements.

The School of Communication Sciences and Disorders offers Masters of Clinical Science degrees in Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology, and participates in the Graduate Programs of Health and Rehabilitation Sciences (HRS). The HRS Program hosts Canada's only combined clinical-research degrees (i.e., MCIsc-PhD) in Speech-Language Pathology and Speech and Language Science, and in Audiology and Hearing Science. The School maintains the research-oriented H.A. Leeper Speech and Hearing Clinic, which includes the provincially funded tykeTALK and Infant Hearing programs. Within Speech-Language Pathology, the Clinic provides specializations in preschool speech and language, and adult and adolescent voice, fluency, and acquired neurogenic communication disorders. Within Audiology, specialized clinical services include infant assessment and assistive device fitting, pediatric amplification, aural rehabilitation, and geriatrics. The Faculty of Health Sciences also is the home to the internationally acclaimed National Centre for Audiology, a major hearing health care research facility.
