DESCRIPTION

Though overshadowed by contemporary developments in France and Britain, and indeed eclipsed by Kant’s Critical revolution, there was an active and rich philosophical tradition in Germany in the 18th century. In this seminar, we will focus on many previously untranslated and largely overlooked thinkers, including such important figures as G. W. Leibniz, Christian Thomasius, Christian Wolff, Christian August Crusius, Georg Friedrich Meier, Martin Knutzen, J. H. Lambert, and J. N. Tetens. We will also consider how the early Kant engaged with and was influenced by many of these thinkers. Our readings will cover issues in metaphysics (substance, space and time, immortality, the principle of sufficient reason), epistemology (truth and skepticism), philosophy of religion (proofs of God’s existence, theodicy), logic and the doctrine of prejudice, and the philosophy of mind (consciousness and identity).
