

MIKE HENSEN The London Free Press

Silvia Penuela of Western's Schulich School of Medicine & Dentistry explains her research into a protein found in skin that is important for proper skin development and wound healing to Michelle Gabriel, left, and Michelle Dubinsky at London Health Research Day on Tuesday at the London Convention Centre. The event featured about 350 students and those in postdoc fellowships from various research labs in London. It's estimated $135 million in grants are awarded annually to London-area labs for their work.