

Western
Centre for Animals
on the Move

Movement Mondays . . .

Organismal responses to a variable climate: lessons from songbirds

Dr. Maria Stager

Assistant Professor, University of Massachusetts Amherst

ABSTRACT

Phenotypic flexibility is one potential mechanism used by organisms to respond to environmental variation. This seminar will focus on the mechanisms that enable organisms to mount flexible responses, including the time course over which physiological responses occur, the cues that initiate these responses, the traits and underlying loci that are involved, and the ecological circumstances that lead to the evolution of flexibility

Monday, March 4, 3:30 – 4:30
Location: Collip 112