INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION IN GLOBAL TIMES

Thursday, November 19, 2015
1:00 - 2:00 pm

Council Chambers, Room 315
University Community Centre

A unique Author & Critic Panel to discuss the complexities of engaging in international education across a “changing landscape” and the “educational effects of international encounters, experiences and lessons.” Discussion will be based on Paul Tarc’s 2013 book, International Education in Global Times: Engaging the Pedagogic.

Panelists:
Mark Franke, Director, Centre for Global Studies
Huron University College

Julie McMulin, Vice-Provost (International)
Professor, Department of Sociology

Nanda Dimitrov, Associate Director
Teaching Support Centre

Moderator:
Aisha Haque, Language and Communication Instructor, Teaching Support Centre

Paul Tarc, PhD
Faculty of Education

Paul Tarc is Associate Professor in the Critical Policy, Equity and Leadership Studies academic research cluster, Faculty of Education at Western. His main research interests in progressive and critical modes of education are articulated through ‘post’-informed theories of globalization, representation, subjectivity and pedagogy. His first book, Global dreams, enduring tensions: International Baccalaureate (IB) in a changing world (2009), uses the IB as the focal point to historicize the ‘international’ of international education under globalization. In his former profession as a school teacher, Paul taught in South America, South-East Asia and Ontario.
