

SP 9505A Information and Research Methods, Alena Robin

This is a mandatory course for all graduate students in the Hispanic Studies Program. The course is organized around a series of practical topics to offer students a better understanding of the academic life and fundamental resources in the Graduate program. This course is designed to explore research methods, academic writing, and scholarly skills. We will cover topics such as finding the adequate literature, scholarship applications, conference proposals, publishing, and the job search.
