LINGUISTICS 9811b: Dialectology. Winter 2025. Wednesday, 11am-2pm, UC 2120

David Heap, UC 3122, Phone: 661-2111 x85709 E-mail: djheap@uwo.ca

This course offers a solid grounding on the fundamental theoretical and descriptive concepts of dialectology as well as practical experience for developing scholars. Students are invited to deepen their knowledge in the field by carrying out a four-phase research project (annotated bibliography, abstract, in-class presentation, final paper) on a specific topic of particular interest to them chosen in consultation with the instructor. The course addresses areas such as the origins of dialectology and its relationship to other branches of linguistics, linguistic geography, dialectometry, urban dialectology and dialect topography. Materials and readings draw on a variety of languages and language families.
