DESCRIPTION

In this course we will examine some key works of normative political philosophy on the topic of global justice and human rights. Questions to be considered include: Is global justice possible in a diverse and unequal world? Are there universal principles of justice that apply to all peoples of the world? Or, do we have special obligations to our fellow compatriots? Do people have a right to be free from poverty? Is the language of rights adequate for addressing poverty? What constitutes a just distribution of benefits? Who owns natural resources and should there be a global redistribution of natural resources? What is global labor justice? Do people have a right to immigrate and what kind of right is this? Do wealthy countries have a moral obligation to admit more migrants? What is at stake in being stateless? Are human rights sufficient to deal with the problem of refugees? Our investigation will draw on works from key thinkers, including Immanuel Kant, John Rawls, Charles Beitz, Thomas Pogge, David Miller, Amartya Sen, Martha Nussbaum, Iris Marion Young, Hannah Arendt and Seyla Benhabib.
