DESCRIPTION

Ethical issues in health care represent some of the most pressing issues faced by Canadians. In this course, students will learn about the most important bioethical issues across the human life span, from conception to death. At what point in development do human beings acquire moral status? Is it ethical to select human embryos for desirable features? When patients and physicians disagree about treatment, who has the final say? Should COVID-19 vaccinations be mandatory? And can we harvest organs for transplantation from the dead? Diverse philosophical approaches to these—and other—bioethical problems will be considered with an emphasis on the role of moral reasoning. Readings and online video lectures will be supplemented with discussion of real-world bioethics cases. The course is recommended for students considering a career in the health professions, or those who seek a deeper understanding of contemporary social issues. No prior background in philosophy is assumed.

TEXTS

Required: Weijer C., Skelton A. (eds.). Bioethics in Canada (2nd ed.). Oxford University Press, 2019.

OBJECTIVES

The course has three main objectives. First, the course will familiarize students with important topics in bioethics across the human lifespan. Second, it will expose them to a variety of philosophical approaches to key bioethical problems. Third, it will give students the opportunity to apply these differing philosophical approaches to real cases in bioethics.

METHOD OF EVALUATION

Your grade for the course will be based on case analyses, argument analyses, quizzes, and a final exam. All assessments are made available in the Tests & Quizzes tab on the OWL website.

1. Case analyses

When: Three case analyses are assigned during the term

Length: No more than 750 words.

Format: Write an analysis of an assigned contemporary ethics case, drawing on course readings. Case analyses do not have a time limit, other than the due date and time. Responses to questions must observe the stated word limit. Responses that exceed the word limit will receive a grade of 0.

Value: 30% of final grade (10% for each case analysis).

2. Argument analyses

When: Three argument analyses are assigned during the term

Format: Short answer questions based on the video lectures and assigned readings. You will be asked to explicate and critically evaluate arguments. Argument analyses do not have a time limit, other than the due date and time. Responses to questions must observe the stated word limit.

Responses that exceed the word limit will receive a grade of 0.

Value: 20% of final grade

Late penalty: Late argument analyses are not accepted. If you miss an argument analysis, you cannot submit one later. If an academic consideration is received from an academic counsellor, the missed argument analysis will be removed from your grade and the remaining will be reweighted accordingly. If no academic consideration is received, you will receive a grade of 0% on the argument analysis.

3. Quizzes

When: Four quizzes are given during the term

Format: Multiple choice, definitions, and short answer questions based on the lectures and assigned readings. You will be asked about key concepts and arguments. Quizzes are time limited (20 minutes) and closed book. Responses to questions must observe the stated word limit.
