MEETINGS: Tuesdays 10:30 a.m. – 1:20 p.m.

Instructor: Antonio Calcagno, PhD

Contact Information: King’s University College, Faculty Building, Rm 213
acalcagn@uwo.ca

Office Hours:
By appointment: Please feel free to send me an email message so that we can arrange a time to meet.

DESCRIPTION:

This course will cover the major texts of Hannah Arendt’s philosophical corpus, starting from her earlier work on Augustine of Hippo to her later works, The Human Condition and The Life of the Mind. We shall read Arendt’s texts closely in order to trace the development of her views of human nature, humanity, the political life, the social world, love and forgiveness, the public and the private spheres, and community. We shall also examine her famous claim concerning the “banality of evil” by reading parts of her famous and provocative text, Eichmann in Jerusalem. Students will not only be introduced to the works of Hannah Arendt but also to her claim that there is a profound difference between philosophy and political theory. In particular, this course will analyse whether or not the Arendtian argument for a new human social order postulated in conjunction with her concept of the political is tenable.

The objectives of the course are:

1. To familiarise students with the work and ideas of Hannah Arendt, especially her social and political philosophy;
2. To develop tighter analytical and critical skills in thinking, reading and writing.

3. To assist students in developing their own philosophical responses to the questions and problems posed by Arendt’s thought in light of their own scholarly interests and/or disciplines.

METHOD:

The course will have a seminar-discussion format. There will be some lecture-discussion components during the class meetings.

EVALUATION:

1 seminar—(20%): Students choose a reading from the syllabus to present. Your presentation should focus on an aspect or argument of the text that you find intriguing and/or important. In addition to presenting the key elements of Arendt’s position, you should also offer a critique of the position. Presentations should be about 30–40 minutes in length. Students will lead question and discussion period. Students not presenting are expected to come prepared to participate in the discussion on the assigned text.

1 short paper—(15%) A brief written critical response paper (3–5 pp.) to a reading other than the one chosen for your seminar presentation. Due February 13, 2024.

1 large research paper—18–25 pp. (50%). Due April 2, 2024.

Class participation—15%

TEXTS:

These texts can be easily obtained at all major online booksellers. Excerpts of texts can also be found on the class OWL site under the Resources tab.

Eichmann in Jerusalem (New York: Penguin, 1994)
On Violence (New York: Mariner Books, 2001)
Useful Secondary Resources:

SYLLABUS:

9 January: Introduction and explanation of course; a philosophical biography of Hannah Arendt; organization of seminar presentations.

23 January: The Origins of Totalitarianism, chapters 9 and 10

30 January: The Origins of Totalitarianism, chapters 11–13

6 February: The Human Condition, Parts I and II:

13 February: The Human Condition, Parts III and IV

20 February: Reading Week: NO CLASS

27 February: The Human Condition, Parts V and VI: small paper due

5 March: Eichmann in Jerusalem, chapters 1 and 2, Epilogue and Postscript

12 March: The Life of the Mind, Part I, Appearance
19 March: The Life of the Mind, Parts II and III, “Mental Activities...” and “What makes us Think?”

and

Read The Life of the Mind, read pp. 11–70 from Willing

26 March: Guest Lecturer: Dr. Gabriella Bianco: “The Concept of World in Hannah Arendt”

[No student seminar presentation]

2 April: On Violence (whole text)

Statement on Academic Offences:

Scholastic offences are taken seriously, and students are directed to read the appropriate policy, specifically, the definition of what constitutes a Scholastic Offence, at the following Web site: