[John Berger, cat, from Bento’s Sketchbook]

Description
The title of this course is a nod to John Berger’s Ways of Seeing, a project that took shape both as a book and a television series in the early 1970s. Turning away from conventional art history, Berger joined a generation of thinkers, artists, and activists who interrogated our conventional understandings of the relationship between seeing and knowing. Collectively, this group opened important questions about the gendered, racialized, and sexualized dimensions of the human gaze, as well as the political and performative dimensions of representation, the influence of capital, and the connection between looking and listening. In short, this generation of thinkers inspired a broad investigation of human relationality through the politics of regard.

Our course tracks this intellectual and creative trajectory, treating our various ways of seeing and listening as relational ontology characterized by exposure and the vulnerability of an incarnated self for whom the other’s attention is necessary. We will regard looking and listening as a historical processes—both individual and social—which, paradoxically, depend on being seen and heard. Here the classical formation of the liberal human subject is displaced by an understanding of the self as radically dependent on the other.

12th FINAL PROJECT WORKSHOP + WRAP-UP

Assignments:
1. Passage analysis (25%) on-going
2. Questions (25%) on-going
3. Final project proposal (10%) due March 22nd
4. Final Project (40%) due April 12th

1. Passage Analysis: approx. 750 words; weight 25%—ongoing
You will be required to present your thoughts about one of readings at least once during the term. Pick a concept or a short passage from one of the week’s assigned readings and prepare a brief discussion about its significance. Include the passage as the heading to your discussion and bring copies to distribute to the class. The idea of this assignment is to work closely with the text, unfolding and reflecting upon the significance of the passage you have chosen. You might wish to choose a passage that you believe to be the crux of the author’s argument. Or you might choose to focus on something more obscure in order to speculate on the significance of the outlying idea. I encourage you to choose something that strikes you. Treat this as an exercise of “working through,” or what Hannah Arendt describes as “understanding.” Depending on your choice, you may wish to use the quotation as a way to try to paraphrase or summarize the author’s argument. Or you may wish to deconstruct the logic at work in the passage. Or you may wish to link the quotation to another reading from our course. You are strongly encouraged to frame your work with a few questions. Your discussion of the passage should be no more than 750 words.

2. Questions: approx. 250 words each; weight: 4 x 6.25%—ongoing
On four separate weeks, prepare a question based on the assigned reading for that week. Provide context for your question, signaling how your thinking about the question evolved. Your questions should be straightforward, jargon-free, and open-ended. Be sure to make reference to the text. You might wish to focus on a particular passage and parse it in a Talmudic fashion, actively wrestling with the text, seeking the meaning and truth of the words. Or you may quarrel with something an author has written. Either approach is a valid form of critique and privileges the ability to question freely and without inhibition. There is no need to rely on outside materials for this assignment, but you are welcome to relate your question to something you’ve heard or seen.

3.-4. Proposal + Final Project: 500 (10%) + 3000 (40%) words—due March 22nd and April 12th
The form of the final project is your choice. If you choose to write a standard scholarly paper, it should be an original and exciting piece of writing that grapples with and makes use of ideas from our class. I encourage essays that are theoretically athletic and conceptually fresh, that open some new terrain and show some adventure in the craft of writing. Providing a sense of the larger context and intellectual stakes of your argument is necessary. A musical quality in the prose is most welcome, as is experimentation with genre. Alternatively, you are welcome to develop a project that works directly with image or sound in some fashion. This could mean producing a series of drawings, a soundwalk, short podcast.

Regardless of the shape of your final project, you are required to write a proposal. The proposal should be approximately 500 words and it should include your research question and its context, a description of the body of work that your project will engage, the thinkers with whom you will be in dialogue, and, if applicable, the lens you plan to use in your analysis.

We will workshop the proposals in class, so bring a copy for each person in the class.

Western is committed to achieving barrier-free accessibility for all its members, including graduate students. As part of this commitment, Western provides a variety of services devoted to promoting, advocating, and accommodating persons with disabilities in their respective graduate program.

Graduate students with disabilities (for example, chronic illnesses, mental health conditions, mobility impairments) are strongly encouraged to register with Accessible Education Western (AEW), a confidential service designed to support graduate and undergraduate students through their academic program. With the appropriate documentation, the student will work with both AEW and their graduate programs (normally their Graduate Chair and/or Course instructor) to ensure that appropriate academic accommodations to program requirements are arranged. These accommodations include individual counselling, alternative formatted literature, accessible campus transportation, learning strategy instruction, writing exams and assistive technology instruction.
Health/Wellness Services
Students who are in emotional/mental distress should refer to MentalHealth@Western http://www.uwo.ca/uwocom/mentalhealth/ for a complete list of options about how to obtain help.
