FOR INFORMATION

1. Policies on Use of Unexpended Income in Award Accounts

At its meeting of September 10, 2001, the Property & Finance Committee approved the Policy for Use of Unexpended Income in Award Endowments and the Policy to Recapitalize Unexpended Income in UWO Award Accounts, as outlined below:

POLICY FOR USE OF UNEXPENDED INCOME IN AWARD ENDOWMENTS:

In order to maximize the effective use of unexpended income in award endowments, an annual review of award accounts will be done.

- The Registrar's Office and the Faculty of Graduate Studies, in consultation with the Division of Financial Services, will review the UWO held award accounts and revise either the award value and/or the number of awards available up to the annual UWO endowed allocation for spending.
- Foundation Western awards will be reviewed by the Executive Director and either the award value and/or the number of awards available will be revised to maximize the effective use of Foundation Western's endowment funds.

Awards revised as a result of this review will be reported to the Property & Finance Committee for information, normally in September.

Note: The term award refers to Scholarships, Awards, Bursaries, Prizes and Fellowships.

POLICY TO RECAPITALIZE UNEXPENDED INCOME IN UWO AWARD ACCOUNTS:

In order to recapitalize unexpended income in UWO award accounts, the Division of Financial Services and the Alumni Relations and Development Office will perform an annual review of the unexpended balance in the UWO endowments.

- Where there is an active donor relationship a financial report will be provided by the Alumni Relations and Development office to inform donors of the desire to re-capitalize the excess funds. Future donor agreements will include provision to capitalize excess income annually.
- Where there is no active donor relationship the funds will be re-capitalized.

Note: Policy refers to UWO held endowments only.

Background:

As of April 30, 2001, there is a large amount of unexpended income in the University's named endowed award funds that is being carried forward from prior years. This excess income has resulted from the fact that the University's named endowed award funds have earned excellent investment returns over time, resulting in a growth in the annual allocation for spending that has not been matched by concurrent increases in award values. The annual allocation for spending is calculated at 5% of the average capital balance at May 1 over the most recent three year period. This amount is added to the income account for all endowed funds every year. However, award values are not reviewed annually and there is no mechanism in place to do this easily.

Currently each award increase must be approved initially by either the faculty for which the fund is held or by the donor(s). Subsequently, each change must be approved by the Property & Finance Committee on behalf of the Board of Governors before the Office of the Registrar or the Faculty of Graduate Studies can access the funds.

Named endowed award funds are established by gifts from one or many individuals, businesses or other organizations. Approximately 60% of the funds do not have a current donor contact. Some awards are very old or were given as a bequest or memorial where no contact name was provided. In these cases, Financial Services, the Office of the Registrar and the Faculty of Graduate Studies usually consult with the Faculty for which the fund is held before making changes.

For the other 30% of funds, donors are contacted whenever possible to allow the transfer of excess income to the capital account. Although current award agreements and provisions include a clause allowing the University to increase award values or numbers to meet the needs of students, documents prior to April 2000 do not include this stipulation. Transfers of excess income to capital have required approval by the donor(s) whenever possible, which has delayed the increase in awards by as much as 6 weeks.

The above policies will improve administrative efficiency by establishing 1) a review process which will allow flexibility in increasing award numbers/amounts if excess income is available and 2) a revision process for existing awards which allows for the full amount of available funds be utilized each year.
