Course description and objectives

This isn't a theory course. Some background in literary theory might help, but this course is neither a replacement for a theory course nor a course that requires any prior knowledge of theory. Think of it as a series of creative writing assignments with different kinds of constraints, much like constraints of form in composing a villanelle or a sonnet. We will read passages from over 2000 years of theoretical work, ranging from such thinkers as Aristotle and Longinus to Gerard Genette, from classical considerations of rhetoric to discussions of what constitutes the fantastic. The graded work of the course will be four creative exercises in different genres based on our critical readings, and the objective is to become better writers by having more tools at our disposal.

Required texts

None. Everything that I'd like you to read will be available on the course website, and we won't be reading all that much. We will, in addition to considering theoretical approaches, read some shorter works (poetry and prose) that model the effects we are trying to achieve.

Recommended texts

Should you have time and wish to read some works that will help you with two of the modules in the course, you might read Henry James' The Turn of the Screw and William Faulkner's The Sound and the Fury or As I Lay Dying. Let me stress that this is entirely optional!

Course requirements and grade allocations

The course will be divided into modules. Each module will have the same structure: in the first week, we will read and discuss some literary theory and/or a short work. For the second week, we will draft our own creative responses to our readings, submit the draft on Wednesday, and discuss our work. In the third week, we will revise and submit a final version of our creative responses and a discussion of the process by which we arrived at that final version. In the four modules, students must write at least one work of poetry and at least one work of prose. The initial expectation for the creative responses is that they will be between 500 and 1500 words each, but assignments outside that range can be negotiated.

Module 1 (25%; due date TBA)
Our first module will take as a starting point the definition of literature. From there, we'll consider defamiliarization or estrangement, language as material, and détournement.

Module 2 (25%; due date TBA)
Our second module will consider other ways of making strange. Todorov's definition of the fantastic, his notion of hesitation, will be combined with ideas of the uncanny.
Module 3 (25%; due date TBA)
Our third module will consider the sublime (largely through Longinus’ discussion) and some literary examples of the sublime.

Module 4 (25%; due date TBA)
Our fourth module will be about narratology, specifically focalisation and different kinds of discourse. We will experiment with different narrators and different styles of narration.

Course Policies

Assignment Format
All assignments are to be “typed,” and must have your name, course name, section number, and instructor’s name on the first page. Do not use a cover page; these are particularly unnecessary for online submissions. When using sources (unlikely, but not impossible!), you will be expected to follow MLA, APA, or Chicago citation practice.

Submitting Assignments
Assignments are due on the dates specified in the syllabus. Late work will be penalized at 2.5% per day unless I have permitted an extension of the due date. You must contact me ahead of time for an extension (see also the section “Accommodation Policy” below).

Attendance/Participation
This is a senior-level seminar course. I expect you to be “present” and participating, but the only penalties revolve around missing peer review. Peer review is an important part of the course. Students who do not participate in the peer review or who fail to submit drafts for peer review will receive a 10% deduction on their assignments (5% for each component). That could be 10% on the each of the four modules.

Schedule

Week 1: Introductions/Module 1 readings on the defamiliarization/détournement
Week 2: Module 1 draft creative responses
Week 3: Module 1 final creative responses due
Week 4: Module 2 readings on hesitation/the uncanny
Week 5: Module 2 draft creative responses
Week 6: Module 2 final creative responses due
Week 7: Module 3 readings on the sublime
Week 8: Module 3 draft creative responses
Week 9: Module 3 final creative responses due
Week 10: Module 4 readings on focalisation and discourse
Week 11: Module 4 draft creative responses
Week 12: Module 4 final creative responses due